Too Sick for School?????

At one time or another, every parent faces this dilemma: Is my child too sick to send to school? Below are some helpful hints to help you know when not to send your sick child to school:

- * Temperature of 100 degrees or more within the past 24 hours
 - * Vomiting or diarrhea within the past 24 hours
 - * Earache
 - * When strep is suspected but the results of a throat culture are not yet known.
 - * A positive throat culture for strep: student should be on antibiotic treatment for 24 hours before returning to school.
 - * Any symptoms of acute illness such as persistent cough or runny nose accompanied by body aches.
 - * A red eye with crust, mucous or excessive tearing (until diagnosed by a physician and treated with medication for 24 hours (pink eye)
 - * Any skin lesion with honey brown crusts (until diagnosed by a physician and treated with medication for 24 hours if impetigo
 - * Skin lesion: mild itchy ring shaped pink patch with a scaly, raised border and a clear center (until diagnosed by a physician and treated with antifungal cream (ringworm)
 - * If your child has head lice that has not been treated
 - * If your child requires any medication for pain stronger than Tylenol or Ibuprofen, they should not attend school.
- The guidelines listed above are meant to help parents determine if a child should attend school or other activities. Your child should look and behave like him/her self for 24 hours before returning to school.
- A sick child who returns to school too soon is at risk for picking up other infections due to lowered immunity
 - A child who is still sick is likely to infect other students and staff
 - A child who is not feeling well will not be able to focus on schoolwork.

Please notify school if your child develops any communicable condition.

Remind your child about frequent hand washing. It is the most effective means of preventing the spread of communicable diseases

Some diseases in a pregnant woman may threaten the health of the mother and/or her unborn child. In general pregnant women are well advised to avoid persons who have infectious illnesses, particularly if rashes are involved.

Please call the school office and if your child is diagnosed with these diseases since we have many pregnant women here at Trinity

Chickenpox: Most pregnant women have already had chickenpox and are immune to the disease. In this case, they and their unborn babies are safe from exposure to the virus. However if a woman who has not had the disease and is not immune, comes into contact with a known case during pregnancy, there may be a significant health risk. Please inform her OB as a matter of urgency, so that an assessment can be made and preventive measures can be considered.

- Rubella (German measles): Exposure to rubella virus in a non-immune woman during early pregnancy may lead to damage to the unborn baby. It is also now routine for women to be offered testing for immunity to rubella as part of their routine antenatal care.

* Shingles.....

Pain, burning, tickling, tingling, and/or numbness occurs in the area around the affected nerves several days or weeks before a rash appears. The discomfort usually occurs on the chest or back, but it may occur on the belly, head, face, neck, or one arm or leg.

- “Fifth” disease or “Slapped Cheek” disease. If a woman is exposed to this virus in early pregnancy (before twenty weeks gestation), she should promptly inform her OB. Investigations can be initiated to check if infection has been acquired so that actions can be taken to reduce the chance of problems with the pregnancy. In general, it is probably advisable that women in early pregnancy

Flu-like symptoms (usually without a fever), such as chills, stomachache, or diarrhea, may develop just before or along with the start of the rash. Swelling and tenderness of the lymph nodes may occur
